DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

1. Claims 1-24 and 27 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Nakayama et al (US Patent No. 4,531,119).

Regarding claim 1, Nakayama discloses a method for generating Japanese text in response to signals generated by a user (col. 1, line 63 to col. 2, line 5) comprising; receiving signals generated by the user which specify one or more collections each of which includes one or more syllables (col. 2, lines 51-62); determining that one or more predicted words include any syllable of each of the one or more collections (col. 2, lines 51-62); presenting the one or more predicted words to the user for selection (col. 2, lines 51-62).

Regarding claim 2, Nakayama discloses the one or more collections are each associated with a respective consonant (col. 3, lines 4-10).

Regarding claim 3, Nakayama discloses a vowel one of the one or more collections is associated with a null consonant (col. 3, line 4-10).

Regarding claim 4, Nakayama discloses one or more collections correspond to a fifty sounds table (col. 2, line 51 to col. 3, line 64).

Regarding claims 5-6, Nakayama discloses the signals generated by the user specify each of the one or more collections in response to a corresponding single key press (col. 2, line 51 to col. 3, line 64).

Regarding claims 7-8, Nakayama discloses determining the kanji representation of each of the one ore more predicted words and presenting the one or more predicted words comprises presenting the kanji representation of each of the one or more predicted words (col. 2, lines 51-62)

Regarding claim 27, Nakayama discloses implementation on a computer (figure 1).

Regarding claims 9-16 and 17-24, claims 9-16 and 17-24 are similar in scope and content to claims 1-8 rejected above, and are therefore rejected under similar rationale.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

2. Claims 25-26 and 28 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Nakayama in view of Ho et al (US Patent No. 6,307,541).

Regarding claims 25-26 and 28, Nakayama does not disclose the system for generating Japanese text is implemented via a wireless telephone or text messaging device. Ho discloses a method and system for inputting characters through virtual keyboards from a mobile phone (Figures 2-6). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill at the time of the invention to modify the system of Nakayama for implementation in a wireless phone or text messaging device, as suggested by Ho, for the purpose of providing inputting of Japanese characters at a high speed in a convenient and efficient manner to mobile and wireless users.

Response to Arguments

3. Applicant's arguments filed March 21, 2005 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant argues "Claim 1 recites receiving signals generated by the user which specify one or more collections each of which includes one or more syllables." Applicant argues Nakayama et al do not teach signals representing collections of syllables as recited in Claim 1, and further argues "since all syllables of the Japanese language are represented using individual keys, there is no need to consider (and therefore not suggestion for) collections of syllables. The Examiner disagrees and argues, Nakayama teaches the input of syllables of the Japanese language via a key input and thus an input of one key yields “one collection which includes one syllable”, and an input of multiple keys would accordingly yield one or more collections which includes one or more syllables.

Conclusion

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
